
I heard

Posted by olsen - 2007/12/11 20:38

I heard GE won the wind powering turbine contract so I Would assume that here in a minute we are going to have more Wind power mills. Thats a good thing. I have noticed alot of change when it comes to trying to strengthen our world.

=====

Re:I heard

Posted by twocents - 2007/12/27 15:35

Awesome!

I will be watching for news of new turbines going up. So far it has been pretty much private entities that have invested in wind power, so this is a big step.

=====

Re:I heard

Posted by Ricardo - 2008/01/08 18:29

Do you see a lot of wind turbines near your home? There's only one in the city that I know of, but north of here there are about a dozen or so.

=====

Re:I heard

Posted by twocents - 2008/01/08 21:21

Not so many here around Chicago that I see. When I was living in Texas though I saw quite a few smaller ones meant for home use.

=====

Re:I heard

Posted by N.Doe - 2008/01/12 02:17

I envy you because I don't see many wind turbines in a year.I just love them.Especially when there are hundreds of them,each 60 feet high.It's truly majestic and beautiful.I can't hope for turbines in my area because it's near the mountains.One can only dream on such a view near home.

=====

Re:I heard

Posted by Tartan - 2008/01/15 22:13

I've seen the ones in California that are on the tops of the mountains and filling the valleys. And they go on for miles. It's certainly not a sight I would want to see from my home. I always mused that they outlawed billboards out there but then allow such an obtrusive blot on the landscape, but maybe that's just me. I would honestly rather see smog across the landscape than these. At least you can tell there is a landscape with the smog....

=====

Re:I heard

Posted by Tartan - 2008/01/15 22:14

I've seen the ones in California that are on the tops of the mountains and filling the valleys. And they go on for miles. It's certainly not a sight I would want to see from my home. I always mused that they outlawed billboards out there but then allow such an obtrusive blot on the landscape, but maybe that's just me. I would honestly rather see smog across the landscape than these. At least you can tell there is a landscape with the smog....

=====

Re:I heard

Posted by Ricardo - 2008/01/16 22:01

I knew someone who powered the lights in their cottage about 30 years ago with a small windmill, but that was more the size of the ones you'd see over wells.

=====

Re:I heard

Posted by Se7en - 2008/01/16 22:22

Tartan wrote:

I've seen the ones in California that are on the tops of the mountains and filling the valleys. And they go on for miles. It's certainly not a sight I would want to see from my home. I always mused that they outlawed billboards out there but then allow such an obtrusive blot on the landscape, but maybe that's just me. I would honestly rather see smog across the landscape than these. At least you can tell there is a landscape with the smog....

Lol

Is it actually that bad? I have seen pictures of power generating turbines and they don't look that bad, but I guess it would be a different story if one actually saw it in real life. I guess I wouldn't really mind them that much though, since they are only turbines whereas if it was smog I really would be concerned for my health.

=====

Re:I heard

Posted by ammulu - 2008/03/19 20:55

I had seen these turbines in my village and such views are lacking in the bigger places. Good to hear the news that GE won the contract, I like the way every natural thing is put into use for some purposes to be fulfilled by humans.

=====

Re:I heard

Posted by cassie - 2008/03/24 10:44

We do have a lot of turbines out here. Most of them seem to be on long stretches of the highways, and I actually enjoy driving past them. I wish we had more, More energy here in California is needed to keep with demand. The part of California I live in has not disallowed billboards and or signs.

=====

Re:I heard

Posted by carlaabt - 2008/03/25 00:19

I think it would be wonderful if they put in more wind turbines. The price is very high to put them in, but from what I've heard, the upkeep isn't any worse than any other form. They are so much cleaner that I think it would be worth it. A big company choosing to do so, would probably help them a lot, too, because people who are concerned about the environment would be more likely to support them.

=====

Re:I heard

Posted by carlaabt - 2008/03/25 00:19

When I drive home from where we are stationed, to where we are from, I pass a lot of wind turbines. I don't think they are ugly, or pretty for that matter. I just see them as something that is needed. They make much cleaner energy, and that in and of itself is beautiful! I wouldn't mind seeing more around here.

=====